Following on from the example receipt described in Issue 1, symPrint Issue 2 shows how Symbol's Adaptive Printer Driver (APD) can also handle receipts with one or more 'optional' sections, such as the "damage" section of this car rental receipt.

Using the APD's 'template' facility, additional sections of a receipt (or label) can be switched in or out as required. The process described shows how application programs (either on the Symbol PDT, or on a host server if using Symbol PocketBrowser) can use virtually any portable printer without needing any knowledge of that printer's command language, or of the means of communication between terminal and printer.

Issues 1 and 2 of symPrint are available to licenced users of Symbol's Adaptive Printer Driver, on request to printers@uk.symbol.com.
